Searching the Public Record

The National Personal Insolvency Index (NPII) database

WHAT IS THE PUBLIC RECORD?

The public record is a permanent electronic register of personal insolvency proceedings in Australia maintained and updated by ITSA. Known as the National Personal Insolvency Index (NPII) it contains records from August 1928.

The purpose of the NPII is to provide publicly available information regarding the insolvency status of individuals.

The NPII contains details of:

- Creditors Petitions
- Debt Agreements
- Personal Insolvency Agreements
- Bankruptcies
- Insolvent Deceased Estates
- Control Orders and Authorities

The information available includes:

- the name, date of birth (if known), address (suburb/state) and occupation of the person as disclosed on documents accepted by ITSA when the proceeding started
- previous names and aliases if known
- the type of proceeding, the date it started and the administration number
- the name and business address of the trustee or administrator of the proceeding
- the current status of the person and/or the proceeding (eg whether a person is discharged from bankruptcy or whether a Creditors Petition for a person's bankruptcy is in progress).

ITSA can withhold or refuse inspection of certain information on the NPII where access to that information could jeopardise the safety of a person who is a bankrupt or a debtor. However, a person's name and date of birth cannot be withheld.
